

Graduate Apprenticeship in Civil Engineering

The Graduate Apprenticeship in Civil Engineering develops skills and experience to produce multi-disciplinary graduates. You will study at Glasgow Caledonian University to gain a BSc (Hons) Civil Engineering (Environmental Civil Engineering) and after graduation you will continue working with Roads and Transportation and progress towards Incorporated Engineer (IEng) status with a professional institution. During your training you will be a member of South Lanarkshire Council staff. The salary during training will start at £20,876 with annual increments available and you will be paid as a full time member of staff with the same benefits as other council staff. The Council will cover all course fees.

What will you learn?

The course has been developed by the university in partnership with employers to ensure it meets industry needs. This is reinforced through significant work based learning which involves a 4 year blended study period with approximately 1/5th of your time spend at university and remainder in the workplace. The apprenticeship will develop your civil engineering skills and experience in a number of disciplines including structures, construction materials, geotechnics and project management.

How to apply

There is a minimum entry requirement for candidates interested in this role.

- 4 SQA Highers (ABBB) –
Maths (Essential)
Physics, Technological Studies or Engineering Studies (One of these)
2 other Highers (one of which could be a Foundation Apprenticeship).

1 of the Highers above should be at A

A Foundation Apprenticeship is accepted as equivalent to one higher as part of the overall grade profile of Highers required for entry. Any essential subjects at Higher should still be achieved in addition to the Foundation Apprenticeship

If you meet the entry requirements and would like to apply, please register your interest along with your name, school, previous grades, predicted grades for this year and contact telephone number to Gail Russell at gail.russell@southlanarkshire.gov.uk. Please also inform your Pupil Support Teacher.

You will then be invited to an information session and provided with instructions on how to apply.

Deadline for applying: Wednesday 26th February
